SINGLE PACKETS AT LIST PRICES. WE GUARANTEE

That all seeds sold by us shall prove to be as represented, to the extent that should they not do so, we will replace them; or send other seeds to the same value. But we cannot guarantee the crop any further than the above offer, as there are so many causes which operate unfavourably in the germination of seeds in a tropical climate, over which we have no control. Among the causes of failure may be mentioned unfavourable weather, which is one of the most important. The soil may be in proper condition when the seed is planted, but the weather which follows may be too wet, which will cause the seed to rot; or it may be too hot and dry, which destroys the germ before it shows itself. The soil may also be unfavourable for the variety of seed planted. And lastly, the seeds may be and are frequently destroyed by vermin of various kinds. Such occurrences are beyond the power of man to prevent, and for which we cannot be responsible.

THERE can be no doubt, says Dr. Morell Mackenzie, that the voice has developed greatly since our "half-human ancestors" wood each other in the primeval fo: ests, and it is conceivable that it may in time to come acquire the power of producing musical effects at present undream of. It is also probable enough that as the voice gains in sweetness it may lose in power, th latter quality being more required in barbarous than in highly civilized conditions. On th other hand, we are tailer and of larger chest girth than our predecessors even of a not very remote date. It is reasonable, therefore, to suppose that the average lung and larynx are bigger, nowadays and the air-blast from the lungs stronger. This would appear to justify us in believing that the voice is stronger than was even two or three centuries ago. There are, however, no facts that I know of to prove

These were presented with a tray of meat each. The Grand Secretar Pao, being a vegetarian, was presented with a tray of cakes, and Prince Chun being the Emperor's father had a special tray of delicacies all to himself. The position to cat these Imperial gifts, we believe, is the kneeling one. As we didn't care for the stuffed meat, and besides were afraid of the Sanitary Board shoving an our in, we refused the distinction. Besides, the posture is one that only agrees with us under certain sentimental conditions, when prett yeyes are looking down upon us; conditions, we need hardly say, which were here totally absent.

MEM. for the Sanitary Board from the Straits Times: - We have been shown by Messrs Grunberg Bros. of Singspore the working drawings hope to get tried in Singapore where so much interest is being taken in the destruction of town rubbish by fire. The contention for Horsfall's cinerator is that by a preliminary generatio of water-gas it produces a fiercer heat than any other known furnace of the kind, and that by the continuous use of a steam and air bl st a temperature of 1500 deg. is maintained, so that perfect combustion, and a consequent absence of smoke and smell, is obtained. It is said also that after first being started with fuel no other fuel need ever be used, but that the worst kind of refuse can be burned of itself. The mechanical arrangements for tipping and feeding also seem to be very good. The steam for the blist is produced by the waste heat of the furnice, and steam for other purposes may also be obtained in the same way. The furnaces a e well reported of from other towns. We understand that Mesars. Grunberg, being satisfied of the efficiency of these cinerators, are 'not eager to sell or lease them, but are quite willing to offer to take a contract to burn fixed quantities of town seluse. In Calcutta these cinerators are now being erected SUPPLEMENTING our remarks of yesterday in respect to the rumour of the Chinese Emperor's decease we would remark :- There is a native proverb which says "where there are waves there must be wind to produce them," and the rumour we chronicled yesterday may not be altogether far from the fact that some one has left the intrigueladen atmosphere of the Peking palaces for something more-or less-ethereal ; and it is ust conceivable that Prince Chun, who had been ailing for a long time and whose convalescence, under the treatment of one of the late Dr. Mackenzie's pupils, was reported to be only a superficial one, had at last succumbed to the malady which afflicted him. Hence, perhaps, the fact of His Royal Highness dying, being the father of the Emperor, might have occasioned the report of the Emperor's death. The only other high personage to whom the rumour is applicable above, would be the Dowager Empress, that strong-minded woman who until February of this year had held the reins of Government of this immense empire for over thirty years. Be this as it may, the report only of the Emperor's death seems to presage trouble amongst the disaffected, more especially in the Northwestern and Southern provinces of China. Under all circumstances it would be a very regrettable affair, more particularly at this moment, when peace is a paramount consideration for the advancement and safety of the

THE RAWANG MINES.

The Straits Times of the 29th ulto, publishes the following:-The mines sold to-day for Flying Spud, instead of at Petty's or Scott's; $27,500, which covers all the property, were sold in one lot. The buyer was Adakapa Chetty, and besides him two Europeans and three Chetties bid I is said that Adakapa Chetty bid for Ah Yok. In Rawang the price is considered fair.

Liabilities in Kuala Lumpur..... ,, 45 000

Sum from sale of mines.....

Lumpur $ 0,710

Deficiency in Kuala Lumpur $8,500 The Kuala Lumpur creditors, if unsatisfied to the extent of $8,500, will of course claim for that amount in Singapore, so that there will then be claims of $68,000 on an estate of $49,000, showing a deficiency of bout $9,000. To that deficiency there must be added all the costs of liquidation; so that probably the Singapore creditors will get at the most about 80 cents on the dollar, while the Kuala Lumpur creditors will get in the first place about 8/10ths of their claims paid in full, and will then get about 80 cents on the dollar for the balance. that calculation a Selangor creditor $100 would get in all about $96, while ! Singapore creditor for $100 would get only $90. It is worthy of note that if the Resident of Selangor had refrained from interfering with the official liquidation, the liquidation would have probably been improved by about $15,000, which was paid away, on the Resident's instructions, to men who were deeply in debt to the company and who by all accounts were much surprised at being so paid. On that view of the case the fact that the creditors cannot be paid in full is due to the action of the Selangor Residental From several quarters that deserve consideration we find that the views expressed on "Resident's law "in our issue of yesterday have the entire approval of the mercantile community of Singapore, and have a general approval from the bar and from the bench. No one in Singapore has any confidence in Native States law, and the action of the Selangor Resident in seizing and selling the Rawang mines in disregard of the liquidation controlled by the Supreme Court of the Straits is regarded as to bringing matters to a head that, for the sake of the future of the States some system of ordered law must be introduced. We are assured on all hands that with this instance of arbitrary action before them Singapore merchants will hesitate to sink money in the Native States, and that if English investors knew that the companies for which they are finding money, were entirely outside any sanction of ordered law, they would refuse to invest in Malay Peninsula adventures. In short it seems to be the general opinion that the Resident of Selangor, by seizing and selling in a close market, the property of a British Company has made it impossible that the Malay Peninsula can longer remain outside the sphere of British Law. We some little time ago appealed to His Excellency the Governor to move in this matter before he was urged to do so by public feeling; but events have since moved quickly and the sale for a trivial sum of a considerable mine with all its plant and buildings, and the arbitrary fashion in which that sale was brought about, and the autocratic manner in which the means of a company in liquidation were used to discharge claims that were not legally due, have combined to make the mercantile community justly afraid of what may be done next. It is true that no Resident other than Mr. Maxwell would have been likely to act so; but prudent men will not care to trust their means to the chance of 's Resident's mood. Trade can only flourish under the reign of law, and in the Malay Peninsula there is no law but the Resident's words.

AN INCIDENT OF GAMBLING LIFE IN NEW ORLEANS, YEARS AGO.

Eighty-five years ago the city of New Orleans saw some of its palmiest days. The people had not yet begun to realise that Napoleon's monetary requirements had resulted in their being sold, with all their belongings, into the United States, and there was little there that was American. Ducling was considered just the thing, as it was in France. Gambling was freely carried on and the doors were thrown wide open. Many games were backed by heavy capital, and money changed hands like magic. One of the most . popular gambling-houses at this time was attached to the old St. Louis Hotel, on Royal street, where none but gentlemen were allowed

One night a stranger entered the room. He was a Castilian with a clear olive complexion. clean-shaven face, piercing brilliant black eyes: a handsome young fellow of about twenty-eight years. His bearing showed plainly that he was an aristocrat, and one, too, with strong force of character and an indomitable will. He had but little to say, and whenever he was spoken to his conversation was brief but brilliant in the ext eme. He was attired in full evening dress, and as was customary by all gentlemen, wore a sword at his side. His polished manners, yet orbidding presence, attracted much attention, When he entered the place the clock was on the stroke of o at night. He was attended by a single servant, who had naught to say to any one but his master. Together the two strolled around the place at their leisure and for a few moments watched the different games.

"Who is he?" asked one whose curiosity was aroused by the appearance of the stranger. "A stranger, no one knows who," was the

There was no reply. Only a quick, sharp glance, but this was sufficient reproof. Again he put down a roll of money on the red and again he won. A third venture proved equally lucky for the Senor. He was winning heavily. The other players at the same game stopped to watch the new comer. He was as calm as if he hadn't a dollar at stake. A fourth time he put down The following is J. L. on the red and the red won.

On the sixth night the young Spaniard arrived promptly at the usual hour. It was a bright moorlight night. The proprietor of the place and the keeper of the game glanced nervously at the hands of the clock as they slowly traveled around the dial toward o. Both were thinking of the mysterious young Spaniard. and both were hoping that he would not again make his appearance. In five nights he had made fearful inroads in the capital of the house, and if his phenomenal luck continurd it would be but a question of time when the hank would be hopelessly depleted. There was no such thing as barring any person from playing. So it was with no little feeling of anxiety that these two persons watched the clock as the hands crept tound to o Presently the hour struck-one. two, three, four-the proprietors eyes were bent upon the doorway. front of the rouge el noir game. He drew from his pocket a huge roll of bills and placed $10,000 on the rid. It was by far the largest bet the Spaniard had yet begun his play with. The keeper rolled. Round and round went the little ball, and finally it settled on the red. The Senor won, and $1,000 was counted out to him. -The-original-amount-was-put-back-in-pocket and the winnings rg in placed on the red. Once more $10 000 was counted out to him. This $20,000 was then placed on the Senor's favourite color. The keeper glanced anxiously up at him and the Senor nodded. It, was a bet. The keeper could not refuse it. The proprietor looked helplessly on: Again the keeper rolled, and again the senor won. Coolly he counted over the money that was passed over to him, and coolly placed $40 000 on the red. The Spaniard was making a superb play. Crowds gathered around to witness the game, and every one in the room seemed to know that the young stranger was making an effort to break the bank. The proprietor of the house felt this probably more keenly than any of the others present. The keeper looked into the Spaniard's face and said:

"You are betting a little too heavily. The Senor may lose." He was anxious that the bet should be refused.

vet he didn't dare betray his anxiety. The Senor, however, became highly indignant. "What I bet, I bet," he said. "Do you question my right to do as I please with my own?

Do you wish to settle this at the oaks ?" "Certainly not," replied the keeper. ." I only make a suggestion for the Senor's good. The stakes are so very heavy." "The Sener asks advice from no man, and until he dees, suggestions are entirely out of place, particularly from the keeper of the game." The keeper's face flushed and his eyes snapped, but he thought best to 'et the insult pass unnoticed, and again he rolled. The little ball settled on the red, as it always did when the Spaniard bet. "Curse him; he wins again," muttered the proprietor. Forty thousand dollars was paid over to the Spaniard. Every game in the St. Louis was now deserted. Patrons and keepers gathered in a crowd about the rouge et noir table. The proprietor glanced at the clock. It was nearly midnight, and he hoped the Senor would not chance another bet. The latter coolly counted over his money, glanced at his watch, and said:

"I have only a few minutes more. Twelve o'clock is my hour. I bet it all on the red;" and suiting the action to the word he placed the $80,000 he had already won on his favorite color. It was a supreme moment. The proprietor of the St. Louis looked helplessly on, feeling that unless luck should this time turn in his favor he was helplessly lost, and yet he didn't dare to

With firm-set teeth and compressed lips the keeper rolled and the little ball went round and round in its course. Excitement was at fever The Spaniard alone was as calm and collected as if he hadn't a dollar at stake, and not a muscle of his face moved as the little ball its force finally spent, settled down upon the .red. A few moments were required to collect the money together. The Spaniard had broken the bank and used up every dollar of the reserve. The business of the St. Louis was rained. The proprietor, trembling with anger, pushed his way through the crowd, confronted the Senor, and in a loud voice said;

"Only gentlemen play in this house, You Inok like a gentleman, you talk like a gentleman, you act like a gentleman and you play like one If you are a gentleman we must know who you

The crowd looked on with interest. The Spaniard cast a sharp glance at the proprietor's angry face, then taking a card from his pocket. he bent over the rouge-et-noir table and wrote : f The Senor—at the oaks in an hour and a half. The moon shines brightly." Then he put on his hat, coolly and carefully adjusted his gloves, and without another word walked out of the place with his attendant on the stroke of midnight. All knew that the Spaniard would keep his word. At exactly 1.30 he was at the famous duelling oaks, accompanied only by hisattendant. The proprietor of the gambling house, with several of his friends, was in waiting when he grilved. Without any parley swords were drawn and the duel becan. It was soon ended. After. a few thrusts by the proprietor, which were casily parried, the Spaniard made a lunge at his. assailant and he fell back dead, run through the

The Spaniard bid the bystanders good morning, and coolly entering his carriage he was driven to the Bayou St. John, where he entered a skill and was rowed toward the lake by t vo stalwart oarsmen. Nobody in New Orleans, ever saw or heard of him again, Chicago

BISHOP FOWLER AND THE CHINESE.

Bishop Fowler is reported to have said, in an address to the Methodist clergy of Chicago, that the Scott law is "the most dastardly and disgusting thing America ever did, and it will be paid for some day by the blood of America's best men." He further denounced his own country for violating its treaty with China. These sentiments no doubt stir responsive chords of sentiment throughout the East, where there is but little actual information abroad as to the Chinese question.

The Bishop says he was asked in China, Why are you permitted to come here, when Chinese are sorbidden to land in the United

It is strange that upon this State should be put the brand of a judgment concerning the Chinese which was the cause of the exclusion act, when it is the common judgment of all nations that have had contact with that people. Sixty years ago the historian of the Indian Archipelago wrote of them :-

The Chi ese settlers may be described as at once, enterprising. ceen, laborious, luxurious, sensual, debauched and pusillanimous They are the lest conscientious people alive; the constant prospect of gain or advantage must be presented to them to induce them to fulfill their engagements, which they will always evade when their judgment is not satisfied that an adherence to them will be

The testimony furnished by Chinese colonies in Singapore, the Philippine Islands, Austrolia and Japan, is at one with the experiences we have had with them in California. They are all coolie colonies, despised and feared even by the allied races with which they have come in contact; and proof against any improveseemed to warn him that the young Spaniard's ment by association with the Caucausian and presence that evening meant him no good. California should not be made to bear the unjust burden of a judgment upon In a few moments the young'm n stopped in them which is shared by the Hindoos, Burmese, Japanese, Coreans, and by the whites of Australia, British Columbia and South America.

In 1855, Bayard Taylor, an associate of Greeley in the New York Tribune, after visiting China, and bringing to bear upon her people his great and impartial faculty of observation, wrote of

- It-is my deliberate opinion-that the Chinese, are morally the most depraved people on the face of the earth. Forms of vice which in other countries are barely named, are in China so common that they excite no comment amongst the natives. They constitute the surface level, and below them are deeps and deeps of depravity so shocking and horrible that their character cannot even be hinted. The e are some dark shadows in human nature which we naturally shrink from penetrating, and I made no attempt to collect information of this kind; but there was en tight in the things which I saw and heard, which are bought almost dally to the notice of every foreign resident, to inspire me with a powerful aversion to the Chinese race. Their touch is pollution, and harsh as the opinion may seem, justice to our own race dem not that they should not be allowed to a title on our soil. Science may have lost something, but manking has gained by the exclusive policy which has governed China for the past centuries.

That was a statement of California's case in 1855 by a gentleman who honored American literature and was greatly honored by his country. To his testimony may be added that of the Abbe Huc, Sir Harry Parkes, and scores of Europeans who speak from perfect knowledge. . It must be understood that these descriptions apply to the coolie class, to the Chinese who submit to corporeal mortgage to secure the funds necessary to their migration. These are the Chinese immigrants, who have left pollution in their wake in every country they have pene-

We do not deny that China has a class of people corresponding to the few hundreds of American residents in that empire, in whom appear the ultimate refinements possible to their | PERSEVERANCE & LODGE OF form of civilization. But the masses of that people offer examples of every gruesome and grotesque effect of a densely crowded population which has lest its conscience in the fight for, existence. Bishop Fowler utters the awful threat that China has one third of the world's population and that it intends to cast this myriad upon us like a swarm of stinging insects, in reprisal for our violation of a treaty What treaty has been violated? China agreed by treaty that we should have the rights to uspend the immigration of her laborers. The text of the treaty reads:

The Government of China agree that the Government of the United States may regulate, limit or suspend such coming or residence, but may not absolutely prohibit it. The limitation or suspension must be reasonable and shall apply only to Chinese who may go to the United States as laborers, and Chinese laborers who are now in the United States shall be allowed to come and go of their own free will and accord come and go of their own free will and accord.

President Arthur vetoed the twenty-year bil on the ground that it was not a reasonable suspension, and signed the ten-year bill on the ground that it was reasonable.

Subsequently the Chinese Government ordered its Minister at Washington to negotiate a further treaty providing that Chinese laborers now in the United States shall not have the privilege of returning thereto if they go back to Chins, but must remain in that empire. Thi treaty was delayed in ratification by English intrigue at Pekin, after the Chinese Minister had pledged his government to all of its provisions. Pending that delay the Scott amendment to the ten-year bill, was passed and has been sustained by our courts. This constitutes the "dastardly action which has disgusted the Bishop with his
